DID YOU KNOW?

Community college grads can earn high salaries, too!

Workers with associate degrees can earn more than those with bachelor's degrees, depending on their field. Jobs in STEM can be particularly profitable for community college graduates. For example, at the start of their career, those with associate degrees in STEM earn a higher median salary ($60,000) than those with bachelor's degrees in education ($46,000). Roughly 15% of STEM workers have associate degrees and another 14% attended college but did not receive a degree.
